

Past CASP Annual Conferences

CASP hosts annual national conferences each year, where we work closely with interested organizations across Canada who help us host each conference.

Local hosts typically provide leadership to our conferences by articulating the theme, organizing the proposal selection/review process, and constructing the conference program in collaboration with CASP, as well as identifying the location for the conference and managing all local arrangements.

CASP supports our hosts by offering guidance, networking, as well as supplying a dedicated website including the online system for proposal selection/review and for collecting conference registrations.

The act of reconciliation represents why we invite our members, allies and communities to gather yearly. 2019 in Edmonton, was no exception, and together we discussed healing from the impact of suicide on our lives, establishing new goals for preventing suicide and harmonizing our efforts towards a Canada without suicide. Currently in Canada, the theme of Reconciliation invited us to take stock of Indigenous perspectives to our approaches, but the conference also served to present all types of progress in suicide prevention.

Hope and connectedness are central to reducing the impact of suicide in our communities. Through partnerships and open dialogue, our 2018 conference in St. John's, Newfoundland, aimed to enhance understanding of suicide and suicide prevention and aspired to motivate communities to take action on a local level. This conference inspired people to act as they learned from one another and acknowledging we all have a role to play in reducing the impact of suicide.

Art-Based Suicide Prevention, Intervention and Postvention
Prévention, intervention et postvention du suicide fondées sur l'art

Co-hosted by the Canadian Association for Suicide Prevention and the Arthur Sommer Rotenberg Chair in Suicide and Depression Studies at St. Michael's Hospital, this one-day conference in Toronto in 2017, focused on the arts in the healing process for those affected by suicide, and took place as part of our outreach in recognition of World Suicide Prevention Day.
